

Wholesaler Insurance

At Severn Bay we understand that running a wholesale company comes with many different aspects to consider as far as insurance is concerned. Levels of cover for the high amount of stock you carry, cover for your stock in third party premises, seasonal fluctuations and the fact that you might also run a retail outlet that's open to the public all complicate the situation, and mean that an off-the-shelf package won't necessarily offer you the cover you require and the peace of mind you deserve.

We are experienced in covering this type of risk, with clients varying in size from small to multi-sited, national companies. Our specialist team of advisers will come and visit you and get to really know you and your business, ensuring that you get the correct technical solution at the lowest price in the market. We don't take commission from insurers, so we only work for you! We charge professional fees for the placing and management of your business, which we declare up front and in full... So if you've ever wondered how much your broker is earning from you – wonder no more! Also there is no Insurance Premium Tax on professional fees – currently saving you 12% on this part or your premiums alone. Typical Covers for Wholesalers Insurance include:

- Buildings – whether that's for the rebuild cover for the structure or just your improvements to the building as a tenant
- Contents – including office equipment and computers, plant and machinery and of course Stock in Trade including specialist stock such as wines and spirits
- Deterioration of stock
- Business Interruption – cover to get you back to the trading position you were at should the worst happen and you have a significant material damage claim
- Money and Personal Assault cover for staff who handle money
- Goods in transit / Marine/Air Cargo or Stock Throughput covers – for goods you carry in your own vehicles, or that you send via third parties
- And of course... Employers', Public and Products and Warehouse Keepers' Liability cover
